PREFACE

This family record was started as a humble attempt at tracing my ancestry. The attempt was given further impetus by some old records and letters that came into my hands from my cousin Wilbur L. Hopkins, now deceased. As the project was examined and the wealth of available material was realized, a mere pedigree of the family would prove uninteresting and unsatisfying. The problems that were encountered by the presence of certain gaps in the record were such as to challenge, as they did me, anyone who has an urge "to find the answer."

A project of this nature engages the attention of one who enjoys history and has an interest in people and likes to follow their movement across the country as did this family as they cleared the land and established homes and places for themselves in a new community. They gradually improved their standards of living and education. Some have removed to other localities to protect their families from marauding savages as did Thomas Hopkins a man of nearly sixty years of age, with the responsibility of his son's wife and her two small children, did at the outbreak of King Philip's War. The Hopkins family has been represented by some member of the family in most every war of our country. The ways of peace and education have also held their interest. One was a Quaker.

The education of the early generations was largely gained at the home fireside or from the minister of the parish, and later at the common school. The members of the still later and more recent generations are graduates of high schools and colleges, university, and professional schools, with bachelor's, master's and doctor's degrees.

Arnold, Editor; Family Genealogy of Franklin Burton and Plain Rogers; Elisha Stephen Arnold's well authenticated work, The Arnold Memorial--William Arnold of Providence and Pawtucket 1587-1675 and a Genealogy of His Descendants (1935) deserves special recognition. Mr. Arnold has furnished us information concerning the ancestry of Thomas Hopkins, the date and place of his birth, and the time of his landing in Providence.

My appreciation for the manifest interest shown and the ever-ready help rendered by the assistants in the Burton Historical Collection of the Detroit Public Library is sincerely expressed. Acknowledgment is made of the assistance and interest of Edna D. Tawse, granddaughter of Lorenzo P. Hopkins, of Lucia Bell Hopkins a granddaughter of Francis P. Hopkins, of Mrs. Robert Gregg Kelly granddaughter of William Henry Harrison Hopkins. Acknowledgment is also made of the contribution of Anson B. Millard of the A. O. Smith Corporation of Milwaukee, Wisconsin toward the biographical sketch of William Robertson Kepler. Appreciation is expressed to all others who have co-operated in any way especially to those who have completed the questionnaire or made other contributions.

PREFACE TO SECOND EDITION

The desire to make the first edition of Thomas Hopkins of Rhode Island and Oyster Bay as complete as possible has led to new sources and the discovery of descendants of Jeremiah[5], Daniel[5] and William[5], Hopkins. Many errors crept into the original text published in 1951. Since then new evidence has been discovered. Dates and names have been carefully checked. Naturally, also there have been marriages, births and deaths in the family.

So great a number of corrections and amount of new and additional material accumulated that the decision was made to prepare a revised and enlarged edition. Much of the original has been rewritten. The new material has been incorporated in its appropriate place in the original work. The practice of many geologists only to carry on the records of the male members who had families to subsequent generations has not been followed. The records of many of the female members with families have been carried on. In some instances the extended records of single members have been advanced to a place with other members of their generation.

Many persons whose names are found in the Vital Records of Rhode Island and other sources and who very likely are descendants of Thomas Hopkins, the settler, cannot be connected unmistakably with their proper families at this late date. The records contain "too little" and the time is "too late." For this reason it is unfortunate that there are those living descendants who fail to respond to inquiries either because of a lack of vital information or of interest in their family record. Those who have pertinent information and fail to cooperate are inexcusable in the eyes of the searcher. The searcher himself may be at fault. He often lets an opportunity slip by and another never presents itself. Circumstances and the uncertainties of life may make it impossible to secure crucial data not again available.

The compiler is greatly indebted to the following for their interest and assistance in the collection of the data for this revised and enlarged edition, namely:

Mrs. George (Ruth E. Bowen) Brewer and Mrs. Ebenezer (Hable Bowen) Comstock, descendants of Betsey Hopkins Bowen; Mrs. Arthur D. (Helen F. Groat) Olin, Mrs. Carl D. (Nellie A. Reynolds) Washburn and Miss Mary E. Hopkins, all great grand children of Jeremiah[5] Hopkins; Mrs. Lewis E. (Gertrude Hopkins) Tarr, Mrs. Grant (Alca Thomas) Hopkins, Mrs. Clyde (Pearl Altenberg) Grove and her daughter, Mrs. Joseph (Avonelle Grove) Mason, great and great great grandchildren of Daniel[5] Hopkins. Their graciousness, patience and interest and that of all others who have responded to queries are gratefully acknowledged.

THOMAS HOPKINS AND HIS DESCENDANTS

The surname Hopkins was originally a nickname for Robert "Dobkins," "Hobbins," then "Hopkyns," which form one of the earliest of purely English surnames.[a] Timothy Hopkins in his history of John Hopkins of Cambridge, Massachusetts states:

> The name of Hopkins in its present form appears in England, early in the 15th century, variants of the name one hundred years previously, and was common in English shires. . . . The difficulty and distribution make it difficult to identify branches in the old country and the perplexity is not permitted by the immigrants from there to America. Now of the twenty, or more original Hopkins colonists here prior to King Philip's War (1675) . . . proved to be related and none of them visible the knowledge of the settlers can be placed across the Atlantic.[b]

Among the early settlers of the Hopkins surname: (1) Stephen Hopkins, a passenger on the Mayflower in 1620; (2) Thomas, a son of William and Alice (Arnold) Hopkins of Yoxall, Staffordshire, England who arrived with his family in 1635; (3) Edward, a merchant who came first to Boston in 1637, then removed to Hartford, Connecticut and later returned to England; (4) John, a land proprietor in Cambridge, Massachusetts, who removed to Hartford, (5) Samuel of Milford, Connecticut, who moved to New Haven in 1657; and (6) William, an inhabitant of Roxbury, Massachusetts.

Thomas Hopkins, son of William Hopkins of Yoxall, Staffordshire, England, was a proprietor of Providence Plantations, Rhode Island. This fact is well established by the evidence presented by Fred A.

Arnold, member of the Rhode Island Historical Society, in the well authenticated work, The Arnold Memorial--William Arnold of Providence and Pawtucket, 1587-1675, and a Genealogy of His Descendants, (1935), edited by Elisha Stephen Arnold.[a]

Mr. Arnold writes that the records of Governor Winthrop show that on June 24, 1635 as many as fifteen ships were counted in Massachusetts Bay. No accurate register of the arrival of ships nor their passenger lists were kept. England had just begun to require a registry as she wished to know who came to the colonies. The Governor did record the arrival of two ships--the "James," Captain Graves, and the "Rebecka," Captain Hodges.[b]

In one or more of these ships was a group of neighbors nearly all related by blood or marriage. All sailed from Dartmouth, Devonshire, England, May 1, 1635; all but one of the company coming from Ilchester in Somersetshire or within five miles of that place. The leader was William Arnold whose older son was a young man of nineteen at the time of arrival on the shores of New England. Benedict Arnold, the son, wrote two items in his record after his removal from Providence to Newport, Rhode Island in 1751.

The following items are found in Benedict's record.

> Memorandum. We came from Providence with our family to Dwell at Newport in Rhode Island the 19th of November, Thursday in afternoon & arrived ye same night Ano Domina 1651.
> Memorandum my father and his family Sett Sayle from Dartmouth in Old England June 24th Ano 1635
> Mem. We came to Providence to Dwell the 20th of April 1636 > per me Benedict Arnold[c]

No official list of passengers coming with William Arnold's family has been found but the persons named in the "Family Record" written by

The "Family Record" written by William Arnold from which the above excerpts were taken are corroborated by the church registers found at Northover and the "Bishop's Transcript" at Wells, 1595-1635.

In 1538 during the time of Cromwell, it was ordered that the warden and the parish priest send a copy of the births, marriages and deaths of members of the parish to the bishop of the diocese. The original record was kept in a strong chest with locks, the keys to which were in the hands of the priest and the warden. It was the latter's duty to see that the vital record was kept and that a copy was sent to the bishop who had the record transcribed, hence the term "Bishop's Transcript."

Mr. Edison Salisbury Jones, Esq. of Port Chester, New York, in the Summer of 1902 journeyed to Ilchester and adjoining Northover Somersetshire, England and spent an afternoon examining the parish register there and also the "Bishop's Transcript" at Wells. It was found that the "Family Record" of the Arnold Family is corroborated by the Bishop's Transcripts that contain many returns from St. Mary's Church of Ilchester. At Wells was also found the original register of Northover. This proves most interesting as it begins in 1536, probably the earliest extant register in England, and contains the baptismal records of Alice Gully and Tomsine Arnold, mother and sister of Joane Arnold the wife of William Hopkins.

Some items taken from the parish church registers and the "Bishop's Transcript":

From the "Bishop's Transcript":

1622/3 Jan. 26. Burial Nicholas Arnold.

1622 Deaths
Joane Gullie was buried 30th May
Nicholas Arnold buried 26, Jan.
1622 Baptisms
Grace daughter of William Hopkins baptised 7th day of Feb.

Note: The Family Record of William Arnold preserved and extended for six generations in the family of his son, Governor Benedict Arnold and covering a period of 223 years was found in 1878 by Hon. Isaac N. Arnold, president of the Chicago Historical Society in the hands of Mr. F. A. Lunn, Esq. of Windsor, Canada and is printed in the New England Genealogical Register for 1879, Vol. 33, p. 427.

A comparison of the items taken from the church registers, the "Bishop's Transcripts" and the "Family Record," prepared by William Arnold will show that they agree in essential detail. Fred A. Arnold, in the Arnold Memorial, states, "These facts cannot be too strongly stated; such evidence would be received as final in any court of law in England."[a]

Mr. Arnold cites from four items of evidence that authenticate the names and dates in the William and Joane (Arnold) Hopkins line.

> "1. Family record brought from England by William Arnold.
> 2. Deed from William Carpenter, recorded at Providence.
> 3. Researches made in the summer of 1902 at Northover, Wells and elsewhere in England by Edson Salisbury James, Esq. of Port Chester, New York.
> 4. Bishop's transcripts of Somerset parish records now being published by H. Dally of Hants, England.[b]

"Nicholas Arnold b. Jan. 4, 1571 (1571/2) 15 Elizabeth[c] is the earliest recorded date so far found in the direct line in the branch of the Arnold family with which the Thomas Hopkins family is concerned.

William Hopkins of Michelney, the father of Thomas Hopkins, married Joane Arnold who was the sister of William Arnold and the daughter of Nicholas Arnold and Alice Cully of Ilchester, Somersetshire, England. She was the daughter of John and Alice Cully who died in 1591 and 1583 respectively. Joane (Cully) Hopkins the mother of Thomas Hopkins died in 1621/2 leaving three small children; two, five, and seven years of age. They were evidently taken into the home of Joane's brother, William Arnold. Perhaps otherwise Thomas Hopkins may never have come to Rhode Island.

[c] 15th year of Queen Elizabeth's reign.

Mary Powell Bunker states that Thomas Hopkins married an Elizabeth Arnold, a cousin, supposedly the daughter of Thomas Arnold, a half-brother of William Arnold. This seems improbable as the said Thomas Arnold had no daughters. Moreover, Elisha T. Arnold is authority for the statement:

> No proof has been found that his (George's) father Thomas a half brother of William ever migrated or that Thomas' children died young, as stated by Somerby and Austin, but without any evidence of record of either.
>
> The Thomas Arnold removed to Rhode Island, 1636, and is not a half-brother of Wm. but probably son of Richard, and grandson of Wm. & Katherine Arnold of Kelsale Co., Suffolk abt. 20 miles N.E. of Ipswich.
> Thos. Hopkins' cousin, Richard Arnold Goldsmith, London, in his will 8 Nov. 1644 leaves a legacy of 20 shillings to be paid to "Thomas Arnold who is supposed to be in New England or some other part beyond the seas." No other Thomas Arnold appears in N.E. before 1644.

FIRST GENERATION

1 - Thomas[1] Hopkins, son of William Hopkins and Joane Arnold of Yeovil England; bpt. April 7, 1616,[a] d. 1684 at Littleworth Plantation, Oyster Bay, New York;[b] m. abt. 1648.

The wife died prior to the outbreak of King Philip's War in 1675 and her husband's departure for Oyster Bay. Thomas Hopkins died while living with a daughter-in-law Elizabeth who was then the wife of Richard Kirby. By her former husband she had children named Icabod and Anne Hopkins. This Elizabeth is supposed to be the daughter-in-law of Thomas[1] and former wife of a son who had died before or soon after settlement of a part of the family on Long Island.

Thomas[1] Hopkins was the first of that family name to appear on the records of Providence, Rhode Island in 1638. Young Hopkins was assigned the fourth lot south of what is now Power Street, as a home lot.[c]

There is reliable evidence that Thomas Hopkins came with the William Arnold party which arrived in Rhode Island April 20, 1636 shortly after the arrival of Roger Williams (see page 2). In Farmer's List of the First Settlers of Rhode Island appear the names of Thomas Hopkins (Col. 1, number 116) Lawrence Wilkinson and William Wickenden.[d]

Thomas[1] Hopkins on the twenty-seventh of July, 1640 with thirty-eight others signed an agreement for a form of government for Rhode Island. In 1650 he appeared on the tax rolls of Providence and was made a freeman in 1655. He served as a Deputy to the General Court four years - 1665-7 and 1672; on the Town Council two years - 1667 and 1672. At the outbreak of King Philip's War in 1675 or a little earlier, Thomas[1] removed to Oyster Bay, accompanied by a son, name unknown, who died before his father.[a]

The manner of settlement of the estate of Thomas Hopkins is given in the Genealogical Dictionary of Rhode Island,[b] page 324. It is as follows:

1684, Sept. 17
It was ordered by authorities of Oyster Bay on application of William and Thomas Hopkins of Providence, sons of deceased, that an inventory should be taken of the estate of said Thomas Hopkins, deceased at the house of Richard Kirby.
Thomas Hopkins died on or before Nov. 10, 1684.
1684, Nov. 10
On receipt of letter from Richard Kirby in regard to the death of Thomas Hopkins, the two sons in Providence to whom the letter was addressed, wrote to the Selectmen of Oyster Bay, of plantation called Littleworth, asking them to appoint Ephrain Carpenter and William Thornicraft to look after the matter of the estate for them. For we do conclude them to be men knowing as to our father's affairs, etc.
1685, Oct. 29
Administration on the estate having been given to the oldest son, William Hopkins. He wrote to the authorities at Oyster Bay, that with consent of younger brother, Thomas, he desired the estate movable of his father divided as follows:
To our sister Elizabeth Kirby, wife of Richard Kirby - 10s, and each of her children by him - 5s, and all the rest of estate not before disposed of to the two children Anne and Icabod of our said sister Elizabeth which she had before she married Richard Kirby.[c]

He was made a major for his services against the Indians and was known as Major Hopkins. William was a man of note. He served as a Deputy to the General Court fourteen years, of the Town Council of Providence, twenty-one years. He also prepared a list of militia men in 1687 for the governor.

According to his will, William and his wife Abigail must have been considered well-to-do for their time. He was very popular as a Justice of Peace, marrying scores of young couples as the early vital records attest.

Mary Powell Bunker, author of Long Island Genealogies,[a] states that the unnamed son died in Rhode Island before his father removed to Oyster Bay. The widow, Elizabeth Hopkins, came to Oyster Bay with her father-in-law, her son, Isabod, and daughter, Ann.

Ezekiel was made a freeman of Rhode Island, May 6, 1712 only fifteen years after Zebulon's birth. It, therefore, is reasonable to place Ezekiel ahead of Zebedee in the list of children. This is contrary to most other lists.[a]

Ezekiel was a member of the town council of Scituate in 1731, and represented his town in the State legislature in 1745.

The will of Ezekiel (3) Hopkins was dated 1751, Sept. 16 and proved 1752, Aug. 14. The executors were his wife Elizabeth and sons Daniel and Nicholas. He gave legacies to his wife Elizabeth and sons Daniel, Ezekiel, Charles, Nicholas and daughters Abigail, Patience, and to the children of daughter Catherine, viz: Ruth, Catherine and Sarah.[b]

Joseph Smith was a grandson of William Wickenden, an organizer and one of the early ministers of the first Baptist Church in Providence.

Amos[3] with his family lived in Scituate and Providence, Rhode Island across the Black River from the land his father had left to him and his unmarried brother, Jeremiah. Amos[3] was one of the organizers of the town of Scituate in 1731 and was a member of the Town Council for seven years. In 1753, he sold his land inherited from his father and removed to Providence where he bought 92 acres. The deed is recorded in the Book of Deeds, Providence, Vol. XIII, p. 205. He sold this land in 1756 to Esseck Hopkins for 1000 pounds. This deed is recorded in Vol. XV, p. 119. The house on land served as the Commodore's home until he died in 1802 and was occupied by his descendants for many years. The house was located near Corliss Steam Engine Machine Works in Providence.[b]

Amos[3], with his younger brother Jeremiah[3] who died unmarried were named as legatees of their father's will as follows:

> I give to my two sons Amos and Jeremiah equally to them all my undivided lands on the west side of Seven Mile Line all of which donations of land and commonage, I gove to my two sons Amos and Jeremiah Hopkins to them their heirs or assigns forever in Fee Simple.

Amos[3] and his brother Jeremiah[3] were at Scituate at the time of its organization as a town in 1731. Amos, after the death of his brother Jeremiah continued to live in Scituate until 1753 serving as a member of the Town Council for seven years until he removed to Providence in that or the preceding year.

William Hopkins[3] manifested early in life a predilection for the sea and became an expert sea captain. In point of intellect and talent he is said to have been superior to his brothers Stephen or Enoch, and was one of the most promising young men in the colony. Had he lived in the days of the Revolution, he would have made his mark in National affairs but he died quite a young man.

The following is related of him. At the age of about eighteen he was in London, as a mate or master of a ship when a mob raised, in consequence of a public offender taking refuge in the King's palace, and the avowed determination of the King to protect the refugee. The excitement was great, and the passions of the crowd were raised to the highest pitch. Cries of "Down with the palace," "Down with the King," were shouted from a thousand angry ruffians. With sledges, axes, and iron bars they commenced the work of demolition.

William, seeing their determination to kill the King, placed himself at the head of an armed body of marines and sailors, and being joined by a multitude of loyal citizens, dispersed the mob, for which service the King invited him to make his palace his abode during his stay in London. Accepting the invitation, William was the recipient of many royal favors, among other things, a Colonel's commission, which he sold on leaving London for $900.00. He also received a court suit, richly embroidered in gold braid, which he always wore on entering port.

He made several voyages after this, often going to London, and was always well received by the King.

On one occasion, he with several other Americans, was presented to the Queen of England. The most of them bowed very reverently and kissed her hand, but our gallant commander stood very erect and gave her a kiss of very great respect upon the cheek, which the Queen received with a smile of approval.

William was a military man with the rank of Colonel. June 15, 1739 he was given the command of a vessel, and authorized to raise troops and send out vessels of war to redress seizures and depredations in the West Indies by the Spaniards. When fully prepared and ready to sail, he received orders to disband, etc., satisfactory arrangements having been made by His Majesty and the reigning sovereign of Spain.

In the year of 1743, while coming into the port of Providence, he captured a Dutch ship, there having been some difficulty existing which occasioned the attack. For this he received a vote of censure from the British authorities. He died the following year, aged 38 years.

greater statesman. He was governor of the State nine years, chancellor of Rhode Island College twenty-one years, and he held at one and the same time the following offices: member of Assembly, delegate to Congress, and Chief Justice of Rhode Island. He was designated as Hon. Stephen Hopkins.

He was a member of the committee of the Continental Congress which drew up and reported the Articles of Confederation. He can be distinguished among the signers of the Declaration of Independence as the only one wearing a hat. Being a member of the Society of Friends, he manumitted (freed) his slaves and secured the passage of a law by the Rhode Island Legislature prohibiting the importation of slaves into the colony. He commenced the "History of Rhode Island Colonies and Providence Plantations" but it was never completed. His remains were interred in the North Providence cemetery and the State erected a "monument to his memory."

Rufus, John, Sylvanus, and George Hopkins were sea captains. Sylvanus was shipwrecked on Cape Breton and while there was surprised by Indians and massacred. George sailed from the port of Providence and nothing has ever been heard of him since. Lydia (6) married in Providence, Rhode Island left a large family. Ruth and Simeon died while still young.

16 - Esek[4] Hopkins, third child of William[3] Hopkins, (William[2], Thomas[1]) and Ruth Wilkinson, b. April 16, 1718 in Scituate, Rhode Island, d. Feb. 26, 1802; m. Nov. 28, 1741, Desire Burroughs (Burrows) at Newport, Rhode Island by Reverend Nicholas Eyres.

Esek was a sea captain for several years. He was a public spirited patriotic citizen and became active and zealous in the struggle for American independence. Under a commission of Brigadier-General from Governor Cook of Rhode Island, he recruited and organized five companies for the protection of the colony. Soon after this, on December 22, 1775, he received a commission from the Continental Congress as Commander-in-Chief of the Navy, thus becoming the first American commodore. After a successful and honorable service of over two years, during which he distinguished himself on several occasions for skill and daring, he was deprived of his commission through the sectional jealousies of Congress. He was the first to unfurl the American flag on the sea. He was afterward sent several times as a member to the State Legislature, and filled other public offices, with honor to himself and credit to the State.

Esek was buried in North Providence about a third of a mile northerly from his residence. Sometime before his death, he had given North Providence the land for the cemetery in which he was buried.

His son, John B. Hopkins[5] was captain of the United States ships, Cabot and Warren, in the fleet under his father and distinguished himself for bravery in action, being wounded during one engagement. The son participated in the "Gaspee" affair.

Jabez Hopkins participated in one of the infant industries of Rhode Island. He made among other iron articles tobacco pipes of iron. His uncle or cousin Ezekiel made swords of excellent quality.

Bishop's History of American Manufacturers speaks in regard to the Hope Furnace, the first in the United States:

> In 1735 Samuel Waldo purchased an ore bed in the town of Scituate and erected there a furnace and foundry on the Pawtuxet River which afterwards became widely known as the Hope Furnace. Cannon for the Navy, large balls, bells and other castings were made there and munitions of war were supplied for the Revolutionary contest. These were the most important works in the State (of Rhode Island) in the last (eighteenth) century.

The ore for the furnace was obtained about four and a half miles distance and made accessible by turning a brook from its channel, thus draining the area. After the war a steam engine was constructed at the furnace under the direction of Joseph Brown of Providence for the purpose of draining the pits.

At the time that Jeremiah[4] (Amos[3]) purchased his farm in Windham County, Connecticut he was from Johnston, R. I. according to the deed of record.

While living in Johnston, Rhode Island, he married Avis Matthewson of the same place. The Vital Records of Thompson, Windham County, Connecticut contain a record of the births of the children of Jeremiah Hopkins and his wife Avis.

These two items, with other records of Jeremiah's birth, marriage, and land purchases and sales seem to clearly show that Jeremiah[4] (Amos[3], Thomas[2], Thomas[1]) was a native of Rhode Island and a descendant of Thomas Hopkins of Rhode Island who was born in Yeovil, Somersetshire, England.

Jeremiah[4] Hopkins after his marriage continued to live in Johnston, R. I. He is listed in the 1774 Census of Rhode Island and Providence Plantations. At that time he was residing in Johnston. His family consisted besides himself of two sons, Amos and Daniel, under sixteen, two females over sixteen one of whom no doubt was his wife and one girl, Lusine, under sixteen. It is evident that the four children were born in Johnston where the parents were married and lived until they removed to Connecticut.

On May 16, 1776 Jeremiah[4] was granted a deed by Elias Bowker for farm property in what was then Thompson Parish, a part of the Town of Killingly, Windham County, Connecticut, recorded in Killingly Land Records, Vol. 9, Page 156. The five younger sons were born here. After twenty years Jeremiah sold this land to Kingsley. The deed was dated April 5, 1796 and recorded in Thompson, Connecticut Land Records, Vol. 2, page 328.

Jeremiah is listed in the U. S. Census of 1790 as a citizen of the Town of Thompson, Windham County, Connecticut, with a wife, and four boys under sixteen.

Jeremiah[b] sold his farm in Thompson to Joseph Kingsley signing the deed on April 5, 1796. He with his wife and growing family moved from the Town of Thompson, Connecticut by team to Hartwick to become one of the early pioneers of Otsego County, New York.

Goldsbrow Banyan of Albany on the second day of February in 1798 deeded

> . . . to Jeremiah Hopkins a farmer of Otsego County, New York for the sum of one hundred and ten pounds eight shillings all that certain parcel of land in the County of Otsego in the State aforesaid part of Lot Number One in a certain Tract of 21,500 Acres of Land by Letters Patent under the Great Seal of the late Colony of New York bearing date the 22nd Day of April 1765 granted to John Christopher Hartwick and others.[a]

"This parcel of land lay on the west bank of Susquehannah River beginning at a hemlock tree" and containing ninety-two acres of land. The deed was signed by Go. Banyan and was allowed to be recorded by Jern Lansingh."[b]

Jeremiah Hopkins took an active interest in the affairs of the community, beginning his public service when he was chosen one of the pound masters, pathmasters and fence viewers at the first town meeting held March 6, 1804. Jeremiah was particularly interested in education affairs. He helped to establish and strongly supported the Hartwick Seminary and was buried in the old cemetery near by.[c]

On the eleventh day of March 1809, Jeremiah had conveyed by deed his ninety-two-acre farm to Alfred and Darius Hopkins. See reference to Book A. of Deeds, p. 461., Otsego County, New York.

Alfred and Darius his sons were issued Letters of Administration in the Estate of Jeremiah Hopkins, January 2, 1810. (Surrogate's Office, Otsego County, New York.)

Taking into consideration the date of the deed and the date of the letters of administration, Jeremiah died after March 1809 and before the last of that year.

33 - Jeremiah[5] Hopkins, fourth child of Jeremiah[4] Hopkins (Amos[3], Thomas[2], Thomas[1]) and Avis (Matthewson) Hopkins, b. Apr. 19, 1776[a] d. June 1, 1855, age 79; m. Naomi Smith, d. Mar. 12, 1853, age 88 years.[b] The burials were in the family cemetery at Orlando near Ellicottville, New York.

One story is told of him when he was returning from town at night and passing a cemetery he heard strange noises. He declared he never was afraid of any living man and would be d____d if he was afraid of a dead one. He hitched his team and proceeded to bombard the cemetery with rocks. It is said that a man turned up the next morning with a broken leg.

Jeremiah was said to be a soldier in the War of 1812 and was wounded in the knee, at Sackets Harbor. He was a lover of fine horses and was never happier than when he held the reins over a nice pair. Many things have been handed down by tradition denoting his peculiarities, although it is said that he possessed a good stock of integrity.

No record has been found that Jeremiah[5] possessed any land in either Cattaraugus or in Allegany County, New York. He seems to have made no will. He may have lived with his daughter, Betsey or one of his other children after the family settled in Cattaraugus County. All of Jeremiah's children probably were born in the town of Hartwick, Otsego County, New York.

Alfred[5] a brother of Jeremiah[5], in 1821 settled in Allegany County in what is now a part of Wyoming County in the town of Pike. All of Alfred's children were born in Hartwick, before 1820.

According to a letter dated September 22, 1905, by Albert Skiff, a grandson of Alfred, the grandfather remained in company with his brother Darius on the homestead at Hartwick after his father's death. While living there, Alfred married and the birth of all his children took place. On the sixth day of April, 1820, Alfred Hopkins and his wife Huldah deeded to Darius Hopkins the identical parcel of land that Jeremiah the father had purchased in 1798 and conveyed by deed on the eleventh day of March 1809

[a]Albert Skiff, a grandson of Alfred[5] Hopkins, stated in a letter written in September 1905 that "Nelson, a son of the old soldier (Jeremiah[5]) at last accounts was living at or near Rushford, New York." However, no trace of Nelson has been found in that area. It is reported by other descendants of Cyrus Hopkins that Nelson went to Michigan. As late as 1954, no trace had been found of him there. Also there is a rumor among them that there were two other brothers--Mark, who went to California, and Almon, who settled in Ohio. No evidence that the last two were sons of Jeremiah.

to Alfred and Darius Hopkins. Alfred and his wife Huldah also deeded eighteen acres of land lying on the west branch of the Susquehannah River and south of the original ninety-two-acre farm. Darius paid one thousand dollars, current money of the United States, for the original farm and the adjoining eighteen acres. Deed recorded June 1st, 1820 in Book AA of Deeds, Otsego County, New York, page 461.

Alfred and Huldah Hopkins moved with eight children by team from Hartwick, Otsego County, New York in 1820 after they sold their right to the homestead. Alfred for one year worked a farm that was owned by a man by the name of Moore, situated west of Wyoming Village, Wyoming County at that time a part of Allegany County. They moved thence to the town of Pike in the same county and bought a farm located between the villages of Pike and Wiscoy, where the family grew to manhood and womanhood.

Darius also "on the first day of November, one thousand eight hundred twenty" bought of "Peter Striker of the town of Richfield, County of Otsego and Jane his wife" for "the sum of two thousand and thirty dollars current money of United States . . . all that certain piece or parcel of land lying and being in the town of Richfield, County of Otsego and State of New York and is known by being a part of Lot No. Eight in Schylers patent . . . containing ninety-nine acres of Land, subject nevertheless to a lease given of the right of way to a Spring of water near the south line to Daniel Hawk."

Oran Kingsley, Jr., was a native of Connecticut and his wife was from the northern part of Ireland. Mr. Kingsley was an early pioneer of Ellington, Chautauqua County, New York, having entered lot thirty-four in that town in 1824.

Margaret's brother Calvin Kingsley was a brilliant self-made man, who was connected with Alleganey College from 1839 until his sudden death in 1870. He was elected bishop in the Methodist Episcopal Church in 1864.[a]

In Liber 1, page 19, Book of Deeds, Tuscola County Records, a deed dated April 16, 1840 was recorded Aug. 16, 1851. By this deed Levi and conveyed eighty acres to Jeremiah Hopkins, being the west half of S.E. 1/4 of Sec. 33, T 11N. R7E. in the Saginaw District of Lands. This was a portion of the land certified to Levi Bond by United States Certificate No. 654, dated Sept. 5, 1838. The consideration was two hundred seventy-five dollars.

Jeremiah apparently settled on his farm sometime between 1845 and 1853, probably after the county was organized in 1850. Further, his fifth daughter was born in 1845 in Portage, New York and his youngest one in 1853 in Tuscola County, Michigan. Since the deed was not recorded until August 1851 the family may have arrived in that year. The matter of recording the deed would be one of the first matters to attend to.

For several years Mr. Hopkins ran a hotel in Tuscola. The building now is the I.O.O.F. Hall in that village.

Mrs. L. D. Haines a daughter of Jeremiah wrote of an incident that occurred when he was a boy. Jeremiah and his cousin Frank played butchers with his sister's favorite cat. They shut the cat under a chair to fatten and then proceeded to cut the cat's throat, but it got away alive.

Jeremiah was greatly disappointed that he was not able to preserve the Hopkins name. His children were all girls but he named the youngest Frank A. for his favorite cousin, Frank (Francis P., son of Alfred[5]).

March 10, 1839, Harriett Louisa Skiff, b. Feb. 22, 1820 in Pike Township, Wyoming County, New York, d. Feb. 26, 1907 in Pike Township.

Amos was a farmer and livestock dealer. His entire lifetime was spent in the town of Pike.

Harriett L. (Skiff) Hopkins was the daughter of Samuel D. and Esther Pride Skiff. Amos and his wife moved from Otsego County, New York in 1813 to a farm three miles southeast of Pike. Harriett Hopkins did her own housework up until within a week of her death. She had lived her whole life on the farm where she died.

Children of Amos[6] and Harriett L. (Skiff) Hopkins:

Oct. 1, 1889 in Girard Township, Erie County, Pennsylvania, daughter of Deborah (Barlow) and Wheeler Robertson.

Francis P. Hopkins on December 29, 1835 bought of Wilhelm Willink, et al seventy-two acres of land being situated in the Northwestern part of Lot number Nine in Township number Seven, Range One, Alleganey, New York. The consideration was $149.40. The deed was recorded July 13, 1836 in the Alleganey County Records Liber O of Deeds, page 345. In 1840/1 the northern portion of Alleganey County was made a part of Wyoming County when it was formed. Township number seven became the Town(ship) of Pike.

Francis purchased the farm about eight months after his marriage. It was located not far from his father's and only a short distance from that of his wife's father, Wheeler Robertson. Here three of the children of Francis and Lucy Ann were born.

Francis P. Hopkins and his wife conveyed the seventy-two acres in Lot 9, now in the Town of Pike by deed on Feb. 21, 1848 to Amos and George G. Hopkins two of his brothers, for the consideration of six-hundred sixty-eight dollars. The deed was recorded April 10, 1848 in Book 13 of Deeds, page 66, Wyoming County, New York.

[1]Lucy Ann Robertson was the daughter of Wheeler and Deborah (Barlow) Robertson and the granddaughter of Jonathan and Plain (Rogers) Barlow. See George Barlow, Family Genealogy of Jonathan Barlow and Plain Rogers (New York: George Barlow, 1891).

In the first half of the nineteenth century, associations were formed in the United States on the basis of the Fourierite system of society. Fourier was a Frenchman who advocated the organization of economic units of about 1600 people who would live in communities. The work would be divided among the people according to their natural inclinations. Fourier did not advocate doing away with capitalism nor the family entirely. Basicly Fourier's ideal was a systematically arranged agricultural society.

A colony was formed in Texas. Albert Brisbane and Horace Greely were largely influential in the sudden and wide development in United States. Brook Farm made up largely of literary people in Massachusetts was for a time Fourierist. It proved successful for a number of years.

In 1844/5 an association based on the Fourier system of community labor and interest was formed at Mixmill, now Wiscoy, not far from Pike and in the neighborhood where a number of the Hopkins family had established their farm homes. This like all other experiments of the kind except the Shakers, the Ebeneezer society of Erie County and the Oneida Community proved a failure and speedily collapsed in 1846, involving many of its members in financial ruin.

Eleazer and Elijah Bliss were leaders in the Mixville Association. See History of Allegheny County, New York, page 312; James Truslow Adams, Dictionary of American History, Scribners, pages 316-7.

The compiler's mother once told him that her father Francis H. Hopkins would not have moved to Pennsylvania if he had not had to pay so much money into the Mixville Association. At any rate, he sold his farm in the town of Pike to his brothers and moved to Girard, Pennsylvania in 1848.

Zurtel Lewis Jr. conveyed by deed dated April 28, 1848 to Francis P. Hopkins one acre and one-hundred perches (rods) of land situated in the Township of Girard, County of Erie, Pennsylvania. The consideration was $350. The deed is recorded September 10, 1851 in Deed Book V. page 525. This lot was located near the intersection of Hathaway and Lake Streets, within the present limits of Girard Burrough.

A sister and a brother of Lucy Ann, Fanny wife of Silas Webster and John Robertson, had preceded the Hopkins family to Girard Township. George Barlow an uncle in 1835 had located in Girard Township on the Lake Road. John Robertson bought a farm of rich black walnut land on the Ridge Road west of Girard in 1847. The present owner of that portion of the farm south of the Lake Road is a grandson.

Jonathan Robertson another brother of Lucy Ann purchased on the thirty-first of August, 1849 - Erie County, Pennsylvania Deed Book V, p. 312 - about a hundred acres of land on the Lake Road from the estate of Thomas Gray, deceased. There was a house on the farm into which the family of Mr. Hopkins subsequently moved. They presumably worked the farm on shares. Jonathan living with them until his marriage in October 1857.

For a consideration of thirteen hundred dollars, Jonathan P. Robertson on April 5, 1860 conveyed fifty acres and ninety seven rods of his original purchase to F. P. Hopkins. See Erie County Pennsylvania Deed Book 12, p. 24. The deed is signed by J. P. Robertson and Sarah E. Robertson. This land is a part of a tract of land surveyed on a warrant in the name of Sarah Hazelton and patented to the Pennsylvania Population Company.

Francis (Frank) was a farmer all his life but also worked at his trade of carpenter and millwright. The country side in Girard Township was spotted with saw mills and barns that he had built, some of which are still standing in 1950. When he was over eighty years old, he laid out and helped frame a barn for his son-in-law, Harris D. Kepler. The bank barn on the old homestead on the Lake Road near North Girard was torn down, moved and re-assembled on the Ridge Road, just east of Fairview, Pennsylvania.

Sometimes the jobs were a long way from home as at Sherman's Mill, from which he would walk home, a distance of five or six miles, often carrying his box of tools on his back.

Francis was a man over six feet tall with a strong, erect body. His daughter has told of his being able to crack hickory nuts between his teeth. When a young man, he made a trip down the Mississippi as a boat hand.

Mr. Hopkins was a man of integrity and was held in high esteem by his friends and neighbors. He did not use liquor neither did his children; neither he nor any of his boys smoked. In his later years he supported the Prohibition ticket. He attended the Miles Grove, now North Girard, Methodist Episcopal, now Methodist Church for many years and always read The Christian Advocate, the subscription being continued in turn by his daughter, her daughter, and in 1950 by his grandson, F. Roy Kepler, the compiler.

Francis Hopkins married Lucy Ann Robertson at the infare (an old term for reception) for her brother, John Robertson and his wife who had been married the day before. Someone remarked, "Why don't you and Lucy Ann get married?" Both agreed and they were married then and there. Francis and Lucy Ann celebrated their golden wedding anniversary as did four of their children and two of their grandchildren.

At the time of their fiftieth wedding anniversary, the five children of the couple were all living in Girard Township within a radius of a mile of the old homestead. There were eleven grandchildren and but one, the little daughter of Alfred, was taken by death in all the fifty years.

Lucy Ann had a good common school education and was well trained in the work of the household and in the skills of carding, spinning, dyeing, and weaving. See the Barlow Robertson Genealogy.

When a young man, Alfred spent some time in company with his brother William in Kansas where they took up land. Alfred afterwards sold his land to Warren Barlow, brother-in-law of his wife. While in Kansas Alfred learned the rudiments of surveying, which he still practiced until late in life. He taught school in Branch County, Michigan where he met his future wife who was one of his pupils.

Most of Alfred's life was spent at farming, with adventures at raising potatoes on a large scale, carrying on a butter and egg business in middle life, and building a creamery. The butter and egg business gave him a large acquaintance throughout the county. Profiting by this wide acquaintanceship, he was elected and served as treasurer of Erie County, Pennsylvania. He also served in the Civil War and was a staunch member of the G.A.R. Post 308 of Girard, Pennsylvania.

Alfred and his wife lived to see their fiftieth wedding anniversary.

William Henry Harrison Hopkins as a young man was quite active in games and such tricks as turning cart-wheels and hand springs and the like. He had a good common school education. When the Civil War came on and Lincoln asked for volunteers, William enlisted and served with Company C, 111th, Pennsylvania Volunteers. This regiment was in the Battle of Gettysburg where William lost a leg. He was a charter member of Major W. W. Miles Post, G.A.R., serving as commander and also as quartermaster several years.

He served his town and county in various offices, at one time being a member of the Poor Commission of Erie County. He was a Republican in politics and supported all churches.

Even with the handicap of an artificial leg he was able to carry on the work of a small farm. He was quite adept at blacksmithing and at one time forged the iron work for a pair of bob sleds for his brother-in-law.

William and his wife celebrated their golden wedding in 1913 at their home in North Girard, joined by their relatives and friends.

New York, d. March 26, 1920 in North Girard,*Pennsylvania; m. Dec. 27, 1866 in the Francis P. Hopkins homestead in Girard Township, Erie County, Pennsylvania, Pharis[4] D. Kepler, b. Dec. 1, 1843 in Woodcock Township, Crawford County, Pennsylvania, d. Jan. 18, 1933 in Detroit, Michigan, son of Samuel William Kepler & Christina Sherrod of Crawford County, Pennsylvania. Burial of both Louisa and Pharis was in Girard Cemetery.

Louisa Catharine (Hopkins) Kepler was the only daughter of Francis Porter Hopkins and Lucy Ann Robertson. The farm which was midway between Pike and Wiscoy, New York. When a girl about five-and-a-half, Louisa's parents removed to Girard Township, Erie County, Pennsylvania. To make the trip from Pike exciting, Louisa fell in a spring by the roadside and was nearly drowned. They first lived on a small place near the corner of Nathaway and Lake streets in what is now Girard Borrough. Later her father purchased a farm on the Lake Road. This became the family homestead where she and her brothers were reared to womanhood and manhood and to which the children all brought their mates.

Louisa attended the Stark School, a one-room country school on the Lake Road less than a mile from her home. Louisa also attended the Girard Academy for one or more years, living at her Aunt Fanny's, Mrs. Silas Meeker's.

At home young Louisa learned the ordinary duties of a busy farm home -- meals to prepare, fruit to dry, meat after butchering to take care of, butter to make, rags to sew for rag carpets, quilts to piece and quilt, comforters to tie. . . . It was nothing in those days for a whole wagon load of relatives to come unannounced for an all-day visit. It seemed that everyone liked to come to Lucy Ann's (Louisa's mother). There was someone outside the family staying there most of the time. So there was no lack of company and plenty to do. After Louisa's marriage her relatives also liked to come to her home. Her Aunt Eliza

Robertson often stayed for weeks at a time helping with the dishes and the sewing. She was an excellent seamstress and could make a shirt in a day. Aunt Eliza was cared for in Louisa's home during her last illness.

Louisa was married on her birthday, December 27, 1866. She wore a deep purple, woolen dress with full skirt and over drape and long sleeves. Her bonnet was of the same material as the dress, with gay flowers under the flare in front. The dress and bonnet were cherished for many years until the house burned. As Louisa's hair was dark and wavy, she must have been a beautiful bride.

During the Civil War when the Union was endangered, Louisa not only saw her brother William but also her beloved go to war. She became a faithful worker for the cause in the various local activities. Later she was one of the prominent members of the Women's Relief Corps, No. 42 of Girard, Pennsylvania. The corps was an auxiliary of the Grand Army of the Republic. After the death of her aunt, Marva A. Neely, Louisa became treasurer of the local corps. This office she held until ill health caused her to relinquish the office. Soon afterward the corps disbanded much to Louisa's displeasure. She said they would never have done so if she had been on her two feet. It can be seen how her children strived to complete every task undertaken by them.

Louisa and Ithuris her husband celebrated their fiftieth wedding anniversary on December 27, 1916. A fine dinner, prepared by their daughter, Marion, was served at noon to the honored guests and their children and brothers and their wives. Those at the dinner were Louisa and Pharis Kepler, the children -- Charles, Marion, Roy, William and his wife, Elizabeth; two brothers -- Emilie Hopkins, Frank Hopkins with his wife; Tracey B. Kepler and Frederick C. Kepler with their wives Gertrude and Sarah.

Previously, Louisa's father and mother, an aunt and her husband, and two of her brothers and their wives had celebrated their fifti.th wedding anniversaries. Her husband's grandfather and grandmother also celebrated their golden wedding.

Louisa C. Kepler was a staunch Republican in politics although she never voted in an election. She believed strongly in temperance and was a total abstainer but did not believe in the Prohibition Party. She was a loyal wife, a fond and indulgent mother, and a kind and helpful neighbor. She joined the Methodist Episcopal Church at Fairplain, Pennsylvania afterwards transferring her membership to the North Girard Church in the near-by village, now Lake City, where she remained a member throughout the rest of her life. As long as her health permitted, she gave her untiring efforts to the work of the church and encouraged her children to do so.

Charles E. Kepler, the husband of Louisa C. Hopkins, was raised on a farm and learned to do farm work on his father's and grandfather's farms. His mother died when he was about sixteen. Soon afterwards he was "bound out" to John Haggerty of Girard, Pennsylvania, where he came to live on November 18, 1850. The Haggertys, John and his sister Eliza Ann, treated him as one of the family. Charles was allowed to go to the district school during the winter, allowed the use of a horse to take the girls out, and attended the Methodist Church and Sunday school in Girard.

Although Charles attended school only "about six months," so he said, he could spell and read well and do ordinary sums in arithmetic.

He was a good oral reader and liked to read aloud. He also was well read in the affairs of the day and liked to listen to addresses and campaign talks.

Pharis enlisted in the Army at LeBeauf, Crawford, County, Pennsylvania, December 13, 1863 to serve three years. He was assigned to 150th Pennsylvania Bucktails, Co. I., the same company as his brother Peter. This regiment became a part of the third brigade, third division, fifth corps, Army of the Potomac. At the battle of North Ann River in May 1864, Pharis was wounded in the left hip by a minnie ball, sent to Mt. Pleasant General Hospital at Washington, D. C.; this wound rendering him unfit for further service. He was discharged, December 10, 1864.

Pharis was one of the Kepler boys mentioned by Ida Tarbell and Carl Sandburg in their lives of Abraham Lincoln in connection with the elephant incident. This occurred in the camp of Lincoln's body guard near Mt. Pleasant Hospital.[a]

After their marriage, Pharis and his bride lived on a farm for a year near Saegertown, Pennsylvania. They then removed to Girard Township, Erie County, where they farmed for four years. They were soon to have two children -- Charles, born on the Files Farm, and Marion to be born in the old homestead where the parents had moved. Pharis joined in the farm work on the Hopkins' place. One major job undertaken was the digging of a ditch across the Pettibone and Ward farms to drain a swamp on the farm. This was not an entire success as

as the grandchildren and others for several years enjoyed many hours of ice skating on this swamp.

In 1871 Pharis secured a job at the Girard Depot with the Lake Shore and Michigan Southern Railway, now an integral part of the New York Central. He continued with the Lake Shore nearly thirty years.

During these years he had purchased first a two-acre lot in 1871, built a comfortable nine room house on it, and by 1892 had added eight more acres, and built two barns. This made quite a little farm on which he raised the usual farm crops. For several years, onions were the chief crop. The youngest son of the family paid a good share of his college expenses from the profits derived from raising onions.

After the termination of fourteen years on the rural mail route out of North Girard, Harris devoted all his time to his ten-acre farm until on the night of December 10, 1922, when a disastrous fire destroyed the house and barns with practically all their contents. The origin of the fire was undetermined. The occupants of the house sustained a great shock that took months to overcome. In 1923, Pharis and his daughter Pardon, moved to Detroit into a new house built by his second son. Here Pharis lived contentedly with his daughter until his death in 1933.

Pharis B. Kepler was a charter member of the Major L. M. Miles Post No. 308, Grand Army of the Republic of Girard, Pennsylvania. He served his term in most of the offices. He was one of the last two surviving members when the Post disbanded. He also was a charter member of Northwestern Lodge, No. 162, Independent Order of Odd Fellows, of which he was made a life member."

Mr. Kepler was a lifelong Republican and was proud that he had cast his first vote in 1864 for Abraham Lincoln.

Mr. Kepler had worked hard all his life except for the last ten. Up until the last he was in good spirits and met the end of his life with courage. His mind was clear until the very last.

Harris Kepler was a widely known and respected citizen of North Girard. He had proved himself a hard conscientious worker, was honest and loyal to his friends and the town in which he spent more than sixty years. He could always borrow money if necessary from the bank or his friends on his signature alone as he had the reputation of meeting his obligations.

Eventually he returned to North Girard.

He soon established himself in manufacturing clothes racks and other wooden novelties such as children's toys and swings.

Frank enjoyed his automobile; he was one of the first in the town to have one, and it was a source of pleasure. He would start out for a ride on business or pleasure without fail, and would take one with him. Generally the car was full. He came to be known as Uncle Frank by many in the town.

Frank was publicity minded, a director in the Girard National Bank, and stood for the best. He was a Republican in politics.

Frank and his wife, Ruby, spent their fiftieth wedding anniversary quietly at their home in North Girard. There were no children.

Nov. 29, 1923 of cancer, in Hamot Hospital, Erie, Pennsylvania; daughter of Hiram L. and Lucinda (Tracy) Stearns. Burial of Leslie and Lucy Hopkins in Girard Cemetery.

Leslie Hopkins, like many a youngest son, remained with his father on the farm where he was born. He had a common school education and was a good farmer. When a young man, he spent many an evening sawing out pieces, mostly frames, doll brackets, and other such articles on a scroll saw. He also used to play a bass viol in a dance orchestra and a tuba in the Lake Grove[b] Comet Band.

Leslie, as were his brothers, was of an inventive turn of mind. With a growing family, he saw the need of a greater and more certain income. His usual source to [illegible] which in the home. He devised and patented (1893) a metal dolly for washing clothes, called "The Turbine Washer." He also invented and patented a clothes drier (1887) that could be lowered to place the clothes on, then raised toward the ceiling where they were out of the way and would dry quicker. When not in use, the arms could be folded compactly against the wall. When he got the clothes rack into production and the demand grew and the chamber in the back where he began became too small, he built a separate shop. The business grew and he expanded by adding other articles made of wood for the home.

This business proved very successful. The L. Hopkins clothes racks may be found scattered throughout the Central and Middle States.

After Leslie's untimely death, his brother Frank carried on the business for the family. Later on, Wilbur Hopkins, a nephew managed and took over the manufacturing. When the shop burned, the rights were purchased by Wilbur Hopkins and the business moved to North Girard where in 1950 it is still continued as the L. Hopkins Manufacturing Company. Including Leslie, three other men have been made fairly well-to-do through the outgrowth of the humble beginnings in the old chamber.

Lida married Mack Gregor in 1884 and they went to live on the Gregor farm a mile east of Girard where all of her nine children were born and raised. In 1912 the family moved onto a small farm on Smith Street, North Girard, Pennsylvania.

Mrs. Gregor became a member of the North Girard Presbyterian Church when the family moved to town. She did her full share toward its maintenance and Christian work.

Lida Gregor had a quiet disposition, was refined, patient and pleasant in character. She made many friends to whom she was always true. She was a devoted wife and an ideal mother. She also was a patriotic mother, and when World War II called three of her five sons, she was proud that she had such stalwart and loyal sons. Had the war lasted only a few more weeks, Mrs. Gregor would have seen the remaining two sons leave for the war. These two were soon to leave for military headquarters when the Armistice was signed. During the war, Lida was an active member of the American Red Cross and did her full share in its work of relief.

Iida Gregor's death was caused by heart ailment after only a few week's illness. Her funeral was conducted by Reverend Wilson her pastor. The interment was in Girard Cemetery.

father's farm, the Cook homestead, a mile further east. Like his cousin Charles H. Kepler his was a busy boyhood with outdoor sports and handy contrivances.

He received his education in the public schools, and fitted himself for a business career by attending the Erie Business College.

He was engaged in the jewelry business in Toledo as a young man, and there met Mrs. Hopkins, whose maiden name was Miss Susie Sulier. They were married 45 years the day before Mr. Hopkins died. Following their residence in Toledo, they moved to North Girard where Mr. Hopkins has been engaged in the manufacturing of wood products ever since.

He was first associated with his uncle, the late Frank Hopkins, and then formed a partnership with Mr. Carl D. Hamish, and continued the business under the firm name of the L. Hopkins Manufacturing Company.

When North Girard became a borough, Mr. Hopkins was elected the first Burgess. He was always keenly interested in civic development and was always active in bringing about improvements to the community. A few weeks ago, when in declining health, he worked diligently in the campaign to bring a water system to North Girard. Wilbur Hopkins was the type of citizen that no community can afford to lose.

As a young man, he was active in the National Guard, and in later years, was widely known for his work in the Odd Fellows Lodge. He served a term as District Deputy Grand Master in the western district of Erie County, and represented Northeastern Lodge No. 162 of North Girard in Grand Lodge.

Sept. 17, 1950 in Detroit, Michigan; married Sept. 14, 1892 in the North Girard Presbyterian Church, the Rev. Reese officiating. Harriet Donio Sweeny Murry, adopted daughter of William J. and Ceylina (Anthony) Murry, born Nov. 18, 1869 in Baldwinsville, New York. Harriet's natural parents were John and Sarah (Hart) Sweeney.

Charles Kepler was educated in the public schools of North Girard, Pennsylvania, the Girard Academy and Clark's Business College in Erie, Pennsylvania. He was first employed as a clerk in a general store and later by the Keystone Shade Roller Company. He removed with that company to Saginaw, Michigan. Leaving the Keystone after four years he became bookkeeper and superintendent of the Saginaw Paving Brick Company with which he remained twenty-three years. At the close of World War I, Mr. Kepler came to Detroit where he became the bookkeeper and later secretary of the Essex Brass Corporation. A severe stroke forced him to retire in 1942.

Mr. Kepler was active in the Masonic Fraternity beginning in Girard and continuing in Saginaw where he received many degrees and honors. He and his wife were staunch Presbyterians both having joined that church in North Girard while in their teens. Both participated actively in church affairs both in Saginaw and Detroit. They celebrated their fiftieth wedding anniversary. This was the eleventh such anniversary among his relatives; namely: His great grandfather, Jacob Kepler. Charles H. Kepler was a year old when he was taken to this anniversary in 1869. The other ten were: Francis Porter Hopkins, 1884; Mary S. (Hopkins) Skiff, 1885; Susan (Kepler) Hatfield, 1895; Alfred A. Hopkins, 1910; William Hopkins, 1913; Charis D. Kepler, 1916; R. Jasper Kepler, 1920; Casius E. Kepler, 1920; Frank Hopkins, 1923; Lucy (Hopkins) Andrews, 1941.

Mr. Kepler's remains were interred in the Forest Lawn Cemetery, Saginaw, Michigan, the Saginaw Valley F and A.M. conducting the service.

111 - Marion[8] Kepler second child of Louisa C.[7] Hopkins (Francis P.[6], Alfred[5], Jeremiah[4], Amos[3], Thomas[2], Thomas[1]) and Iharis D.[4] (Samuel[3], Jacob[2], Peter[1]) was born June 12, 1870, at the Hopkins homestead in Girard Township, Erie County, Pennsylvania. She died unmarried, February 23, 1949 in Detroit; the burial was made in the Girard Cemetery, Girard, Pennsylvania.

Marion's education was cut short by illness but she never ceased to read and take courses along the lines of her interests. She received her diploma on completion of the four-year course in the Chautauqua Literary and Scientific Circle. She also pursued and received certificates for proficiency on completion of courses in teacher training for Sunday Schools and for poultry husbandry. She also completed a First Aid course.

Marion was an accomplished homemaker and seamstress. She also enjoyed doing fancy needle work. She was an active member of Fern Rebecca Lodge, No. 235, and the North Girard Methodist Church and Sunday School. After coming to Detroit she was active in the Red Cross work having charge of the sewing unit at Central Methodist Church. She also was active in the Detroit Review Club and was a member of the Women's City Club.

Marion Kepler enjoyed sports and games, and artistic dancing, that especially of Pavlova, Isadora Duncan, and the Russian Ballet. She was immensely fond of Sonja Henie's skating reviews. She appreciated the best in music and loved orchestra concerts. Her reading included the best contemporary novels and books on history and biography. Douglas was a favorite novelist.

While living at the home in North Girard, now Lake City, with her father and mother, Marion was occupied with the usual duties of a small farm home. She conducted a prosperous poultry business, raised asters and gladiolus with profit and for a period of years was dressmaker to the best trade of her native town. She also did needle point. Many pieces of embroidery attest to her skill and taste. She was not satisfied with her work unless it met her ideal high standards. When her brother Will was a small child, Marion made his blouses, dressed his long curls and, according to his last letter to her, "made the only baseball mit he ever had." Attesting to her good cooking, the pans and jars of fried cakes, cookies, especially ginger cookies, large frosted chocolate cakes baked by Marion will not soon be forgotten. Often fried cakes and cookies were mysteriously passed out the pantry window into the willing, uplifted hands of Will's playmates.

To the writer's knowledge, Marion never had any serious love affairs. However, there was some interest manifested in a couple of instances. It was a standing joke in the family that her father "shooed" off Marion's boy friends.

Marion Kepler was devoted to her family caring for an invalid mother for years and her father in the latter part of his life. She was loyal to her family, her friends, and her country. All loved and treasured her.

112 - Frank Roy[8] Kepler, third child of Louisa C.[7] Hopkins (Francis P.[6], Alfred[5], Jeremiah[4], Amos[3], Thomas[2], Thomas[1]) and Phurie D.[4] Kepler (Samuel W.[3], Jacob[2], Peter[1]) was born on Rice Avenue in Milesgrove, now North Girard, Lake City, Pennsylvania, on February 13, 1875.

Frank Roy graduated from the Milesgrove High School in 1903, he being the first boy to graduate from that school. His higher education was obtained at Allegheny College, Michigan State Normal College, Columbia and Michigan universities qualifying at the latter for the Bachelor of Science degree in Education in 1925.

Mr. Kepler began teaching in the rural schools of Erie County, Pennsylvania, proceeded to Saginaw, Michigan where he was a teacher and principal of a grade school, and then taught in Peacock's School for Boys, a military school, at San Antonio, Texas. Subsequently he was invited to come to Detroit Public Schools as a teacher of manual training, teaching three years in graded schools, nine years in Western and Cass Technical High schools and then holding for thirty-three years the post of a Supervisor in the Vocational Department of all Detroit schools. His specialty was drafting and he became the author or co-author of a number of books in this field.

Honorary life memberships in the Michigan Industrial Education Society; Nu Sigma Pi, a graduate fraternity of Wayne University; the Detroit Schoolmen's Club are held by the subject of this sketch. The Cleo M. Martland award for outstanding achievement in the field of vocational education and the maintenance of high professional ideals was granted by the University of Michigan. A certificate of recognition for leadership and achievement in the same educational field was presented by Nu Sigma Pi.

F. Roy has been a Methodist practically all his life. He has been a member and regular attendant of Central Methodist Church since 1917. He has been a Republican all his life. His grandfather Hopkins and his father were Republicans.

engineering in connection with the Pressure Vessel Department. Most of the years 1926 to 1950, he was Chief Engineer of the Pressure Vessel and Tubular Products Department. His removal as Chief Engineer was made only so that he could be placed in a consulting capacity. His associates and fellow workers held him in very high esteem as an engineer and a man. They were better engineers and better men for having worked with him.

W. R. Kepler's Masonic affiliations were with the West Allis Lodge F and A.M. and the West Allis chapter of the Royal Arch Masons. He was a member of the American Society of Metals, Cleveland, Ohio, American Welding Society, Milwaukee Branch.

APPENDIX B

OUR ANCESTRY

The maternal ancestry of Thomas Hopkins, an early settler in Providence, Rhode Island, through the Arnolds, include emperors, kings, dukes and others of noble birth. The lineage of Thomas Hopkins includes Mark Anthony, the Triumvira; Charlemagne, Emperor of the West; William the Conqueror. Likewise the lineage of Lucy Ann Robertson, wife of Francis P. Hopkins, includes the above named personages and King Alfred the Great (874) of England. Saint David I, King of Scotland (1124-53). The last came of a long line of Scottish kings of whom Niall Fugus Mor Earca was the founder. This descent from continental European families comes through:

a) Isabel de Vermandois from her father Hugh the Great, son of Henry I of France.
b) Isabel from her mother Adelheid de Vermandois.
c) Lady Alice de Courtney, wife of Aymar de Taillefer, daughter of Louis VI, called le Gros, a descendant of Charlemagne. Aymar and Alice being parents of Isabel de Taillefer, wife of King John.
d) Plantagenets and other descendants of Matilda of Flanders, wife of William, the Conqueror, herself descended from Alfred and Charlemagne.[1]

David Starr Jordan cites this estimate of Alfred the Great:

> Alike for what he did and what he was there is no equal to Alfred the Great in the whole line of English Sovereigns and no monarch in history as well deserved the title of the Great.
>
> As to Charlemagne we read: "That he was segacious and vigilant as a ruler and commander alike. He watched over and fostered agriculture, trade, art, and letters with untiring zeal, clearing away forests, draining swamps, founding monasteries and schools, building cities, constructing splendid palaces at Aix, Worms, and Ingelheim, and drawing to the court scholars and poets from all nations. . . . He himself was proficient in science as well as all manly accomplishments, speaking latin and knowing Greek though barely able to write. He was tall and stately measuring seven of his own foot lengths, with long nose, bright eyes and a feeble voice but simple in his life.
>
> Excelling all men of his time, to all alike dreaded and beloved, by all alike admired as he was described by an early chronicler.[2]

[2]Ibid., p. 20.

This distinguished background of ancestry has been brought to the descendants of Thomas Hopkins of Providence through the Arnold line and to those of Lucy Ann Robertson, wife of Francis P. Hopkins, through the Wilkinson lines. David Starr Jordan and Sarah Louise Kimball in their book, Your Family Tree, have traced the royal lineage of Thomas Hopkins settler in Providence, to William the Conqueror and Henry I of France and of Lawrence Wilkinson, settler in Providence, to a very early date, in fact to Noah. This first King of Scythia who received the land as his lot upon division of lands by Japheth the third son of Noah (Gen. 5.32 and 6.10). Scythia was situated in the southeastern part of Europe in what is now a part of Russia near the Caspian Sea.

The inventor of letters is said to have been Phoenusa (Fenis Farsa) an early king of Scythia at the time that Nius ruled the Assyrian Empire. Phoenusa being wise and desirous of learning the languages that not long before his time had confounded the builders of the tower of Babel, employed able men to go among the dispersed peoples. These men returned well skilled in what they went for. King Farsa built a school in the valley of Sonnar.

Farsa's son, Niul, after the death of his father returned to Scythia. Report of his great learning came to the ears of the then Pharaoh of Egypt who invited him to come to his kingdom. He was given land near the Red Sea. Niul employed Gaodil (Gael) son of Ethor, a learned and skillful man to refine and adorn the language called Baerla fabbai which was common to Niul's posterity. This language was called Gaodhilg (or Gaelic).

In his youth Gaedhal was stung by a serpent and was immediately brought to Moses who by laying his rod upon the wound instantly cured him whence the Gaelic word "Glas" (Irish Green). This was added to his name because of the green scar which remained on his neck during life. Gaedhal obtained a further blessing. No venemous beast or reptile can live any time where his posterity should live.

Ithe, a descendant of these wise kings and learned men, was the first to invade Ireland. His fathers had reached Spain by the way of Cyprus, northern Africa, the Mediterranean, and Spain.

The Irish chroniclers and planters, namely, Partholan, Miushedle, the Fir-bolgs, Tuatha-di Dan Ans and Clan-na-Mile, were originally Scythians of the line of Japheth who had the language called Bearla-Tabbai common among them all and Ithe understood the Tua-tha-Deanans, without an interpreter. However, certain of the clans rose against Ithe and he was slain.

The seven sons of Milesius after the death of their father resolved to avenge the death of Ithe, their uncle. They succeeded in conquering Ireland. Heber and Heremon, sons of Milesius, divided the kingdom between them and became jointly the first of one hundred eighty-three monarchs of the Gaelic, Milesian, or Scottish race that ruled and governed Ireland successively for 2885 years up to their submission to Henry II of England. The invasion of Ireland took place about a year after Solomon began the foundation of the Temple at Jerusalem.

To further orient Milesius to his time in history the following comment may be quoted, "Pleased with the exploits, learning and services of Milesius as governor of one of his provinces the Pharaoh of Egypt gave him his daughter, the Princess Scota in marriage. As Milesius was contemporary with Solomon it may be inferred that it was the same Pharaoh that gave one of his daughters in marriage to Solomon." (I Kings: 3.1).

Of the first two Milesian kings in Ireland Heber was slain in B. C. 1698. His brother, King Heremon, died B. C. 1683. From Heremon, the seventh son of Milesius, were descended kings, nobility and gentry of the kingdoms of Connaught, Dalriada, Leinster, Meath, Orgill, Ossory of Scotland since the fifth century; of Ulster since the fourth century and of England from the reign of Henry II down to the present time.

Aeneas Tuirmeach Teamroch the 81st monarch of Ireland (384-324 B. C.) was the father of Prince Fiacha-Firmara, the ancestor of the kings of Dalriada and Argyle in Scotland. Loarn, the last king of Dalriada in Scotland was a descendant of Fiacha-Firmara. Princess Earca, daughter of Loarn, married Muireadeach son of Prince Eogian, or Eugene, a son of Niall Fergus Nor Mac Earca, who was the founder of the Scottish Monarchy.

From Loarn the royal line continues through a long list of Kings of Scotland including Duncan I, Malcolm III, Canmore (1057) who married Princess Margaret, daughter of Prince Edward the Exile, son of Edmund II, Ironside, King of England, a descendant of Alfred the Great and Cedric the first of the Celtic kings.

The line of descent of both the Hopkins-Arnold and the Wilkinson lines are shown on the lineage charts. The ancestors include kings, princes, crusaders, signers of the Magna Carta (sureties), earls, barons and knights. Some were slain in battle and one was beheaded.

M. E. Wilkinson in his Genealogy of the Wilkinson and Kindred Families traces several royal lines bearing on the lineage of Lawrence Wilkinson an early settler in Providence, R. I. One includes Mark Anthony and one beginning with Roger Bigod, Earl of Norfolk and Suffolk includes seventeen sureties who signed the Magna Carta.

Mary Conyers of royal descent married William Wilkinson, son of Lawrence Wilkinson of Harploy House, Lanchester, County of Durham, England.[3]

[3]George Barlow, Family Genealogy of the Ancestry and Descendants of Jonathan Barlow and Plain Rogers, p. 158.

The Wilkinsons were strong supporters of the king and were Royalists during the time of Cromwell. Lawrence Wilkinson, the son of William, held a lieutenant's commission in the royal army of Charles I. He was captured and his estate sequestered by the government under Cromwell. However, with special permission of Lord Fairfax, commander-in-chief of the Parliamentarian Army, [illegible] Rhode Island sometime during the period 1645-50. He applied for citizenship in the colony, signed the civil compact and was granted 50 acres of land. About 1645, probably in England, he married Susannah Smith, daughter of Christopher and Alce Smith. Upon their arrival in America and after being assigned land they established their farm about ten miles northwest of Providence at that was Smithfield. They lived the simple life of the early pioneer. "An entire equality prevailed in their household." He participated in King Philip's War and otherwise took an active part in the affairs of the colony. Lawrence Wilkinson had six children, namely.

Samuel (-1727), Susannah (1652-16), John (165[illegible]-1708), Joanna (1657-), Josias (1660-1692), Susannah (166[illegible]-).

Samuel Wilkinson,[4] son of Lawrence Wilkinson, was an expert surveyor, administrator, appraisor of estates, overseer of last will and testaments, etc. He was well liked and trusted by the other colonists who made him Justice of the Peace. As Justice of the Peace he was very popular with the young people of whom he married scores. He had earlier been a captain of a trading ship and came to be known as Captain Samuel Wilkinson, J. P. He was elected several terms during the period 1693-1723 as a Deputy to the Rhode Island General Court, the legislative body of the colony.

Samuel Wilkinson married Plain Wickenden, one of the three daughters of Rev. [illegible] by his first marriage. The latter was ordained pastor of the First Baptist Church of Providence. The second daughter, Ruth Wickenden, married Thomas Smith, a son of Christopher and Alce Smith; the third daughter, Hannah, married John Steer.

The Wilkinsons had four children, Samuel, John, William and Joseph. His son, Samuel Wilkinson, Jr., who lived in Smithfield, R. I., was a farmer, tanner, and currier, also a shoemaker. He was a hard working man and a Quaker. In 1707 he had edged tools worth 1 pound 1 shilling taken from him to pay a fine of 12s for not training (in the colonial troop). A neighbor by the name of Scott is believed to have been the first Quaker in Rhode Island. As a matter of principle, Samuel Wilkinson, Jr. refused to accept office of any kind. Mr. Wilkinson married Huldah Aldrich by whom he had fifteen children.

[4]Much of the material on the Wilkinson Family was derived from the genealogies of Israel Wilkinson and H. M. Wilkinson, Genealogy of the Wilkinson and Kindred Families.

His sister, Ruth Wilkinson, married Col. William Hopkins, popular justice of the peace in Providence. They became the parents of Stephen Hopkins, several times governor of Rhode Island (1755-1764, with the exception of two years), an assistant justice and chief justice of the superior court, a deputy to the Albany Conference (1755), a member of the first and second Continental Congresses, member of the committee that proposed the Articles of Confederation and was a signer of the Declaration of Independence. He helped found the public library in Providence and was the first chancellor of Rhode Island College. He was the most distinguished public man of his generation. Rhode Island has never produced a man of more ability nor a greater statesman.

Plain Wilkinson, daughter of Samuel, Jr., married John Rogers. He and his family moved to Sackville, New Brunswick, Canada before 1776

There is basis to believe that John Rogers came of a long line of Rogers who traced their ancestry through John Rogers the first martyr of the Reformation in England to John Fitz Rogers who first married a daughter of Sir Simon Furneup descended from the Earls of Bush and second married Anne, daughter of Sir Thomas Etchinghem (approximately 1415/20).

Plain Rogers, daughter of John Rogers and Plain Wilkinson, married Jonathan Barlow in New Brunswick and had eight children: Elizabeth, Anne, John, William, Deborah, Sarah, Jonathan and George.

Deborah Barlow married Wheeler Robertson, a grandson of Daniel Robertson of Fairfield, Connecticut, a Revolutionary War soldier, and had ten children: John, Fanny, Esther, Lucy Ann, Matilda, Elizabeth D., Jonathan, Daniel, Catherine, and Mariva A.

Lucy Ann Robertson, daughter of Wheeler and Deborah (Barlow) Robertson, married Francis P. Hopkins, a direct descendant of Thomas Hopkins of Providence, Rhode Island.

It may be observed that descendants of Thomas Hopkins of Providence and of Lucy Ann Robertson, wife of Francis P. Hopkins had ancestors in common through the Arnold and Wilkinson lines. Some of the same blood courses through their veins. So it is with many persons and families making them blood relatives -- brothers, if you please. With a little imagination one comes to vision the relationship of all men, the brotherhood of man.
